In resuming relations with those of our fellow-citizens known to be loyal, who, viewing from their own stand point our national as well as State complications, have honestly differed in opinion, we should promptly lay aside the animosities of the past. The flag which floats to-day over this venerable State-House is the only recognized test of honorable brotherhood among those who cherish this noble inheritance of free government. From its enemies alone, we withhold the hand of fellowship. The domestic issues which have divided us have been settled by the authoritative voice of the people. Can we not, then, forget the dissensions and heartburnings of the past, and come together once more, in a spirit of conciliation and harmony, to give our best energies, as one party, to the work of reconstruction and reorganization upon which we are entering with such prospects of admitted and assured success?...
