Createspace. Paperback. Book Condition: New. David Byrne (illustrator). This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 135 pages. Have you ever wanted to put yourself in another place and time How about attending a party in the Roaring Twenties, or skating to the melodies of an Oompah band on a frozen lake If you have, When We Were Growing Up will be your ticket. The author asked people who were children in the first half of the 20th Century to jog their childhood memories. The result is an inspiring collection of reminiscences that gives dimension to one of the most exciting eras in the history of the world. The Norman Rockwell-style illustrations by award-winning cartoonist David Byrne bring out the humor in each interview. Some readers will recognize themselves; others will see their parents. Young readers will experience history, but this time, with a name and a face. Dina, born in 1914, saw people in her neighborhood in Greenwich Village, New York, bring food out to the soldiers coming off the ships after World War I. George, who became a Tuskegee Airman, tells some funny stories of how his early brushes with the law in Asbury Park, New Jersey, finally convinced him that crime dont pay. Dan from Washington explains why he didnt need a school bus. His father, a section foreman, rode him to school on a ten-foot speeder that was used by railroad workers to check the tracks. Thea, from Arnhem, The Netherlands, remembers waiting at the open window on Dec. 5 to see what kind of candies Black Pete, Saint Nicholas helper, would bring her. Portia tells why even the women in the wild west Kentucky mining town where she grew up carried guns in the pockets of their dresses. Abe, who at nine had his boyish dreams...
