Monte Carlo Calculations of Polarized Microwave Radiation Emerging from Cloud Structures

By Christian Kummerow

The last decade has seen tremendous growth in cloud dynamical and microphysical models that are able to simulate storms and storm systems with very high spatial resolution, typically of the order of a few kilometers. The fairly realistic distributions of cloud and hydrometeor properties that these models generate has in turn led to a renewed interest in the three-dimensional microwave radiative transfer modeling needed to understand the effect of cloud and rainfall inhomogeneities upon microwave observations. Monte Carlo methods, and particularly backwards Monte Carlo methods have shown themselves to be very desirable due to the quick convergence of the solutions. Unfortunately, backwards Monte Carlo methods are not well suited to treat polarized radiation. This study reviews the existing Monte Carlo methods and presents a new polarized Monte Carlo radiative transfer code. The code is based on a forward scheme but uses aliasing techniques to keep the computational requirements equivalent to the backwards solution. Radiative transfer computations have been performed using a microphysical-dynamical cloud model and the results are presented together with the algorithm description. This item ships from La Vergne, TN. Paperback.

Reviews

An extremely wonderful book with perfect and lucid information. This can be for all those who statte there had not been a really worth reading through. Its been written in an exceptionally easy way and it is only after i finished reading this ebook in which actually modified me, alter the way i really believe.
